I keep doing my publication Kent in California

by Kent Roberts

I am here in Los Angeles, where I continue to write and print out my publication Kent. I've noticed since I was a small boy that the local publications weren't talking about me. So I've done what I can to solve that problem, starting this publication for the Brown community in 1999 and spreading it to the global community two years later. Now I will get the news out through the Official Kent Cloud and maybe in 10 newspaper boxes, if I can find somewhere to put them.

The local publications weren't talking about me.

Two garage-related mistakes on record

by Kent Roberts

I've made a couple mistakes at the apartment

so far: 1.) I used dish soap in the washing machine, and it overflowed all over the garage.

2.) I pocket-pressed the garage gate opener while I was backing out, and it shut on the Kentmobile (see picture).

Kent does a good turn: Screw removal

by Kent Roberts

When I was in the Boy Scouts, our slogan was, "Do a good turn daily." I haven't done that over the years, unless you include good turns I've done for myself.

But I was able to do a good turn for a lady on the street the other day. I was walking on Melrose Avenue (near Kent HQ), and the woman was hovering, looking unsure. I made eye contact with her and smiled. She responded by swiveling and starting to walk at my side. Talking very fast, she said that there was a screw or bolt up ahead in the road, and that she was worried that someone might trip over it and hurt themselves. She needed someone to help her move the screw. She told me to wash my hands.

Here is the screw:

Mustache bug sighting leads to accidental death

by Kent Roberts

As self-publisher Kent Roberts transitioned from Austin to Los Angeles, he noted that there were less human beards and more insect mustaches.

The first bug seen by Kent (see "Before Kent Roberts" picture) is believed by Kent Fauna & Flora Manager Kent Roberts to be a possible omen.

"Any time there is an insectile death at Kent World Headquarters, we always scrutinize it to determine if the incident is a portent of ensuing calamity," Kent explained between bites of oatmeal, his shirt off, his posture midway between mediocre and acceptable. "In this case, it was a message from the Aztec goddess Malinalxochitl, letting me know that I need to be careful to limit the collateral damage of my dreams," Kent added as he poured coffee from his French press and looked out the window at the trash truck, marveling at its 5-MPH-stunt-driver-grade maneuvering.

Kent tried and failed to lend a helping hand to this mustachioed visitor. He captured the bug inside a cup and transported it outside. Unfortunately, the bug did not seem to understand how to get out of the cup. The next day, Kent went to bring the cup back inside and saw that the bug had passed away (see "After Kent Roberts" picture).

The specific cause of death is unknown, although many staffers at Kent HQ believe it probably was a victim of dehydration and heat exhaustion. No foul play is suspected.

Kent Sports: Hill Run

By Kent Roberts

There is a series of hills near my house. Paths lead to the top. Then you can run down, if you want.

One day I ran all the way down and realized once I was down that I was wearing my jeans. I lost track of what I was wearing because of two zones: 1.) Kent Sports Zone; 2.) trying-not-to-run-over-dogs zone.

Jeans aren't recommended for marathons.

Jeans aren't recommended for marathons, but they work acceptably well when running down a large hill.
